The Line: A Story for Christmas Bruce Abraham

A lowly caretaker is decorating an aging office building for Christmas. In his pocket is a chain of keys that opens every door, but he has also found the key to profoundly altering the path of people's destinies.

The Line is a story of the deep bonds forged by family, business, community, and war. These important relationships are tested as the caretaker and the old building courageously face the forces of greed and power, which are masked as growth and progress.

It is a story of how the small, seemingly insignificant choices we make in our daily lives propel us toward two paths. On the one path, the first will become last. On the other, the last will become first—all according to our own individual, conscious choosing.

The struggle against selfishness and greed threatens the caretaker as he fights to save the old building and to keep the spirit of Christmas and community alive. And the final steps along the path the caretaker has chosen in life show the powerful effects of doing to others as you would have them do to you.
